LEWIS AND CLARK TRAIL HERITAGE FOUNDATION

“THE GREAT COLUMBIA RIVER”

AUGUST 3–6, 2014, RICHLAND, WASHINGTON

“the natives showed me the entrance of a large Westerly fork which they Call Tâpetêtt ...”

In this image by Northwest artist Roger Cooke, two Sahaptian-speaking men show Captain William Clark and his two-man party the confluence of the Columbia and Yakima rivers. Clark called the Yakima River both the Tâpetêtt and the Tapteal; the name [tâptat] comes from a Yakama village further up the river.

Painting on board in watercolor, ink, and pencil by Roger Cooke, 2003.
